SUBWAY MEN TO BE ORDERED BACK TO WORK

Meetings of Leaders of the Unions Which Have Tied Up All Excavation Jobs in the City Agree to Send the Laborers Back to Their Picks and Drills To-Morrow.

POLICE OFFICIALS, MAKE BIG PREPARATIONS TO QUELL DISORDER.

Contractors, Lumbermen, Material Men and Employers of All Kinds Join Hands in a Union to Suppress the Unions of the Men Which They Declare Must Be Crushed.

Herman Robinson, of the Central Federated Union, announced this afternoon that a committee of the union, of which Mr. Robinson was a member, and the leaders of all the unions that make up the Striking Rockmen and Drillers' Association, who have tied up all subway and excavation work, was held at No. 85 East Fourth street to-day.

Mr. Robinson said that the leaders had voted unanimously to hold meetings all over the city to-night and to-morrow and order the strikers back to work.

Mr. Robinson said that by noon to-morrow all the strikers would be back at work.

No official notification of this has been sent to the contractors, who have not ceased engaging non-union men to go to work to-morrow morning. John B. McDonald does not place much confidence in the report. He called at headquarters this afternoon to arrange for police protection.

All leaves of absence have been cancelled and the full reserve force will be mobilized at every station-house in Manhattan and the Bronx before sunrise. Policemen will be drafted from precincts in Brooklyn and Queens in which there are no labor disturbances to precincts in this borough in which Subway work is being done. In addition to the regular police protection the contractors will have their own private watchmen to guard the men who have been engaged to go to work.

DIFFICULT TO RESTRAIN THE MEN.

The tip has gone out to the policemen that they will encounter serious trouble. The Central Federated Union has shown that it is difficult to handle the 4,000 Italian strikers on the Subway, inasmuch as the strikers refused to endorse an agreement made by the union with John B. McDonald. From this the police believe that the Italians will endeavor to keep the new men from work in their own way, and the way that appeals to them is through violence.

There is no apprehension that the police will be unable to cope with the situation. A dozen New York policemen armed with night stick are regarded as a match for one hundred rioters. The project is to concentrate hundreds of policemen at danger points and turn them loose at the first sign of disorder.

Michael Degnon and other Subway contractors were at the office of John B. McDonald to-day to talk over the situation. The contractors had nothing to say as a rule, except that they were waiting for to-morrow. Mr. Degnon said:

HAS ARRANGED FOR NEW MEN.

"I have made arrangements with agents in Newark, Jersey City and places in Connecticut for laborers to take the places of the men on strike. I will put a full force at work to-morrow. To-day I am doing nothing. All the contractors are standing pat and backing up Mr. McDonald in the stand he has taken."

Other contractors have sent outside the city for help, and some of them say they will get all the help they require in the city. William Bradley said

(Special to The Evening World.) MORRIS PARK RACE TRACK, May 12.—There was not much quality on the programme this afternoon, and it was the sort of a card at which the players and bookies looked askance.

The favorites seemed to stick out in every race, except perhaps the first. This was a scramble for three-year-olds, and half a dozen looked to have a chance. But in the other races the favorites stuck out so plainly that the bookies forced a slaughter, and the players thought it was too easy to be true.

It was not a card that promised good speculation. In fact, it was a poor programme, no matter how one viewed it. The only stake was the Harlem, a selling affair, at which the players and bookies looked askance.

The weather was charming and most enjoyable, and the track was very fast. The Jockey Club stewards held a meeting after the racing, and the players in connection with the race which Shaw rode on Illyria, at Jamaica. It is said that Shaw had been told to ride on Illyria, but he had been told to ride on Ben Howard instead. Ben Howard won.

ALDERMEN BACK SUIT AGAINST FIREMEN'S PLEA LEADER MURPHY

They Favor Indorsing the Two-Platoon System, and Eulogize McNally, the Most Recent Fire Hero.

The Board of Aldermen to-day paid a tribute to the memory of Fire hero McNally, who died last week from injuries received at a fire. Both Aldermen presented a resolution contemplating the erection of an electric fountain in Borough Hall.

At a recent meeting of the Board, the representative from the Forty-fifth Aldermanic District of Brooklyn, Robert F. Downing, protested against the "discriminate use of electricity which flows from third rails and wires to the menace of human life and deterioration of private property." To-day the Aldermen presented a resolution contemplating the erection of an electric fountain in Borough Hall.

Since the introduction of his original resolution, Alderman Downing has studied electricity with a view of becoming an electrical engineer. He is now in love with the science of electricity. The resolution was referred to Park Commissioner Young of the Brooklyn borough.

Alderman Philip Harpischberger will represent Mayor Low, New York City and the Board of Aldermen at the municipal celebration in Dresden, Germany, but at his own expense. A resolution authorizing him to represent the city was adopted to-day.

(Special to The Evening World.) POLO GROUNDS, NEW YORK, May 12.—This was the liveliest day of the season at the Polo Grounds, not in point of numbers, but in arguing, speculation and red-hot betting. Greenbacks dotted the air like a swarm of locusts, silver coins chinked like a thunder getting busy.

A couple of hundred Western men who arrived in a body, racing patrons, commercial travelers and visitors were noisy both in lungs and money, predicting the downfall of New York before Cincinnati struck. "Snap, snap, snap. Wherever you hear a sombrero-clapper has linked to gallop and a diamond shirt stud you might be certain of getting a bet on any feature in the game."

"Why, you people here imagine you can play ball!" was the cheer echoed from post to post in the grand stand. "You've been coming along with a lot of second division teams who could not furnish sport for a kindergarten. Now you're going to run up against some of the real thing. We'll make your Sandows, Iron Men and ball breakers sick before the game's half through. Want to double that bet, or going to hedge, eh?"

The Western men had a lot of fun, and they did not have to go miles for takers. From the club standing they were justified in demanding odds, but so confident was the delegation that the giants are much overrated that even money held sway, and plenty of New Yorkers thought it a mighty bet. Kelley had to answer many inquiries from the Western crowd, who wanted to know why the Cincinnati were not occupying a higher place, but like all ball players, he was not talkative.

"Just got a hot start," he said, "and I'm taking us down to pull up. The longer we play together, the better the game we put up, and just now we feel like winning. So look out."

McGraw hesitated some time about his selection for twirler, having the choice of Matty Taylor or Miller. It was a curious commentary on his fame of last year that when Matty was selected for the job New Yorkers were not nearly so anxious to bet. The impression seemed general that Matty had deteriorated. This, however, was not the case, for he was only too willing to be convinced of their mistake, and a double responsibility, therefore, rested upon the blond-haired giant.

The Reds went to bat. Kelley lifted the third ball to Mertes. Seymour, who had great applause as he stepped up, did the same thing. Donlin, another old Baltimore player, cracked one to center.

The link went had no fears for Browne, who hit cleverly into left field. McGraw was not fast enough to pull up. Second Inning. "Eagle Eye" Beckley, who never has a hitting average above .20, made his first error on Gilbert's fumble. Steinfeldt, on his surprise struck out. Matty's curves were too true for the Corcoran, who closed on Magoon's high one. No runs. Dunn bounced his to Corcoran. The Reds shortstop then made a magnificent stop, one-handed, from Lauder. Gilbert flied to center. No runs.

Third Inning. Dunn handled Peitz's easy one. Ewing was the next victim to Matty's twister. Kelley flied to Lauder. No runs. Bowerman tapped to Ewing. Beckley took care of Matty. Browne flied to Magoon. No runs.

Fourth Inning. Browne was under Seymour's fly. Matty struck out his fourth man in Donlin. Beckley was the next victim, and he threw away his bat in disgust as he ground to short. Dunn struck Ewing out. Van with one hand. McGann raised a fly to center. Mertes rapped a single past second. He got second on Dunn's ball. Dunn was out. Magoon to Beckley. No runs.

Fifth Inning. Steinfeldt flied to Van. McGann nabbed Corcoran's high foul. Magoon fanned. No runs. Lauder bunted an easy one. Gilbert could not beat out his crack to second. Bowerman's hot one went past Steinfeldt. Matty flied to center. No runs.

MAN WHO DROVE GREEN WAGON IS UNDER ARREST.

Taken Into Custody by Detectives of the Cunard Line, Working on Clues About the Infernal Machine Sent to the Umbr'a Last Saturday.

SAID HIS NAME WAS JOHN BATH, AND THEN REFUSED TO SAY MORE.

Was Taken to the Charles Street Police Station, and News of His Arrest Caused Great Excitement at Police Headquarters When Information Reached There.

Detectives of the Cunard Steamship Company to-day arrested a man they allege drove the green wagon which took the infernal machine to the Cunard Line pier on Saturday.

The man, after being questioned by the detectives in the employ of the steamship company, was taken to the Charles street police station and given into the keeping of Capt. Alonzo.

At the police station he gave the name of John Bath and refused to make any statement as to where he came from or what, if anything, he knew about the case. The police say he does not deny he is the man, and does not admit it. He refuses to make any statement whatever.

As soon as he was arrested word was sent to Commissioner Greene and to Inspector McCluskey and Central Office men were hurried to the Charles street station to see if they could be of any service in assisting the Cunard line men.

The announcement of the arrest created great excitement about Police Headquarters and there were many conferences over the phone between Headquarters and the Charles street station. Commissioner Greene said:

"All we know of the arrest at present is we are assured the man who drove the wagon is in custody. He will not talk. We do not think he is the criminal who sent the machine, but we believe his arrest will lead us to the information that will result in the arrest of the real criminal."

ODD POLICE THEORY.

From a detective's view the next most important step would be to identify this man with the purchase of the dynamite or the batteries in the machine. The Cleveland Company, making the batteries, shipped 30,000 of them on Jan. 2, the time the two in the infernal machine were dated as being shipped from the factory.

Although this vast number contain the same date, for some reason the police believe that it will be easier to trace the designer of the infernal machine through the purchase of the two dry-cell batteries than through the purchase of 100 pounds of dynamite of a high grade and rare make.

The dynamite was made at Emporium, Pa., and was shipped to this city. There are possibly not more than two or three places where it could be procured in this locality, and as dynamite is a commodity used in this vicinity almost exclusively by contractors for blasting it is believed that a stray purchaser of 100 pounds would be well remembered by the dealer selling it.

Detective-Serg. Hughes, who had been sent to Emporium to ascertain where the dynamite had been sold, was instructed on his arrival there to proceed to Cleveland to work upon the much more difficult clue of the batteries.

An important clue concerning the purchase of the clock with which the infernal machine was equipped comes from Hoboken. The police have found that on May 4 two men, apparently Italians, entered Swalsky's second-hand store at Spring and Angelique streets, Hoboken, and bargained for the purchase of the works of a clock. They explained that they did not want the clock, just the works, but Swalsky did not have a set cheap enough to suit them.

TRAIL LEADS TO HOBOKEN.

Detective Vetter, of Hoboken, has found A. Nasher, who has a second-hand store at Spring and Paterson streets, West Hoboken, who said that on May 2 four Italians, a woman and three men, entered his place and wanted a couple of dry batteries. He had one in his window, but it was smaller than they wanted.

In examining the letter Expert Carvalho has found a clue which he has reported to the police. It is understood that valuable may result in important developments in the case. Concerning the letter he said:

"In general, the writing, is of a person accustomed to writing letters, and, further, of writing letters for publication. It is paragraphed properly, terse and to the point. The letter throughout is in a rapid, flowing, running hand, showing that the writer wrote with ease and without effort, although making attempts at disguise."

MORTALLY SHOT BY ENRAGED WOMAN.

King, It Is Alleged, Tried to Force His Way Into Her House, When She Used Her Revolver.

Caroline A. Green, forty-three years old, of No. 11 Clinton street, Stapleton, S. I., shot and fatally wounded Joseph King, fifty-three years old, of the same address, this afternoon. The man who lives on the floor above Mrs. Green endeavored to force his way into her apartment against her will. As she was unable to resist her efforts to pass through the door, she seized a revolver and shot him in the abdomen. He was taken to the Smith Infirmary, where he is expected to die any moment.

Mrs. Green, with her husband, who works in this city, occupies the lower floor of No. 11 Clinton street. King, who is a widower, lives with his three children on the floor above. He is employed in the Department of Highways, at Richmond Borough. The woman was arrested and held in the Stapleton police station.

CLUE TO WHITWELL. A letter from a woman in Holloway Springs, Vt., gives what may be a clue to the whereabouts of William Scollay Whitwell, the young Harvard student who disappeared on Feb. 28, after leaving a Fall River boat at the pier in this city.

The woman says that a book agent, professing to be a Harvard man called on her recently. The description of the man fits that of young Whitwell, and in addition the writer of the letter describes the clothing he wore when he disappeared. This is regarded as evidence that the woman may be right, because no description of Whitwell's clothing appeared in the newspaper accounts of his mysterious dropping out of sight.
